your firm's future.

How will joining ACEC WI benefit my firm?

Our member firms understand the importance of belonging to ACEC WI. Here's what they have to say:

Networking

“As a smaller firm, I don't always have access to the resources and knowledge that others do. Access to member firms' wealth of knowledge is well worth the cost of the dues.”

*Kim M Lobdell, PE
KL Engineering, Inc*

“Working closely with other business owners and principals has been very valuable for me personally. Committee meetings provide excellent opportunities for our project managers and technical leaders to work together with other design professionals on initiatives that advance our industry.”

*Rose Morgan, PE
EMCS, Inc*

“It's a big advantage to sit in on the Principals Roundtable Breakfasts and hear how other firms are handling HR, IT or other personnel issues. Understanding how others have handled situations gives us a leg up in determining how to apply the situations to our firm.”

*Brian Hanson, PE, FACEC
Arnold and O'Sheridan, Inc*

“Being a small firm, we don't always have access to the resources necessary to be competitive in today's market. By providing business practice resources, a Peer Review program, and access to quality, competitively priced insurance, ACEC WI gives us that opportunity.”

*Steven J Parent, PE
Baudhuin Incorporated*

Legislation

“One advantage to membership is ACEC WI's involvement in the legislative process. Those successful legislative efforts on issues that affect business in the state greatly enhances our firm's ability to operate.”

*John I Boldt, PE
Clark Dietz, Inc*

“ACEC WI helps firms become a larger voice when it comes to having input on critical infrastructure, licensing, regulatory and many other issues our state government deals with.”

*Kirk Haverland, PE
Larson Engineering of Wisconsin*

“The ACEC WI Conduit Fund has provided an efficient mechanism for our members to become involved politically. The end result is that doors have been opened for our members to provide input on legislation and issues that have an impact on our business activities in the state.”

*Stan Sugden, PE
Ruekert & Mielke, Inc*

“Having direct access to decision makers in the public sector and the opportunity to have meaningful dialogue with them, as well as to potentially influence legislation that may have a direct impact on our business, is very beneficial to our firm.”

*Paul A Tarvin, PE
STS Consultants, Ltd*

Marketing

“The relationships ACEC WI has built with state agencies is important to the industry. Our involvement in the committee that liaisons with the Division of State Facilities has allowed us to better understand the division's needs and improve our service on state projects.”

*Andrew Inman, PE
Vierbicher Associates, Inc*

“ACEC WI is charged with doing what it can to make the business environment better. We feel that charge is extremely valuable and have found our membership in the organization to be everything we expected.”

*Rich Bub, PE, FACEC
Graef, Anhalt, Schloemer
& Associates, Inc*

“ACEC WI is more than a business organization. There are many opportunities for a firm's staff to become involved, particularly in activities promoting an awareness of the engineering profession. The affiliation with WSPE also adds a focus on serving the needs of engineering firm employees as well as firm principals.”

*Michael F Davy, PE
Davy Engineering Company*
